

Gary Yakimov directs the project and development portfolio for CSW's Business and Industry Strategies team, including sector and cluster related work. Gary has helped multiple states and regions develop approaches to advance regionally targeted industry strategies, including the development of research, strategic planning, and training academies. He and his team are building a sector toolkit for use by state and regional leaders.

Gary currently manages the CSW portion of a collaborative project with the National Governors' Association and the National Network of Sector Partners to advance state sector strategies with leadership teams from over a dozen states. Other items within Gary's portfolio include projects and services related to the evaluation of sector strategies; employer-led industry partnerships; and employer approaches to integrated talent management and the recruitment and retention of an appropriately skilled workforce.

Gary currently serves as a consultant to the U.S. Census Bureau to help better market and align data programs with workforce and economic development needs, and is Vice-Chairman of the Board of Directors for the Community Indicators Consortium.
